Summary

Jillian is ready for a change. Her adult son, Tom, is not. Set in a not-too-distant future where a new kind of technology exists that allows anyone to emotionally “uncouple” from anyone in their lives, Thicker Than... asks what it means to cut off ties with a loved one and move on with your life. Can you ever truly walk away? And what are the ethical and emotional

Director’s Note

Welcome, welcome to the world of Thicker Than, a world where in the not to distant future you can choose who your people are and to what degree they remain your people. Is blood truly thicker than water even if it comes at the cost of self? I come to theater by way of the Black church where the audience is a lively part of every experience. I invite you to live fully in this space so If you feel so moved please laugh, cry, exclaim, bear witness, etc. Be in community with us fully as you see fit while also being protective of our actors. This gift they’re offering us is sacred and costs them so much so let’s all take care of each other through this.

The Director

Lamar Perry (He/Him/His) is the Assistant Professor of Directing, UCSD.
